Lauren and Craig are having an argument about watching TV while doing homework. Lauren wants the TV on because she says it helps her focus, but Craig complains that the TV is distracting.

Drawing on your understanding of consciousness, explain the behaviour shown.

In your answer you should:

- Identify and describe the state of consciousness described
- State whether it is better to do homework with or without the TV on and explain why
- Explain why Craig finds the TV distracting and why Lauren has become used to it
- Use psychological evidence to support your response

dence quantity	Many statements are supported by relevant psychological evidence (e.g. name of researcher/theorist or example of a study)	3
tudies)	Several statements are supported by relevant psychological evidence
	One or two statements are supported by relevant psychological evidence dence quality rume,	One or more examples of detailed description of relevant psychological evidence (e.g. 3-4 sentences about a specific research study and findings)	3
method	Relevant psychological evidence, including some description
name. method results	Psychological evidence consists of names/statements only without description (e.g. study of study, name of researcher)
ucture	Well-structured with consistent use of appropriate psychology language and correct spelling, grammar and punctuation throughout.	3
	Satisfactory structure and everyday language with adequate spelling, grammar and punctuation Poor structure with colloquial language and/or poor English expression and/or many spelling/grammar/punctuation errors throughout tal			/3

1) identify + describe phenomenon 2) apply directly to scenario 3) name drop evidence eq" selective attention, as supported by Cherry, is ... \uparrow \uparrow DO THIS FOR EACH CONTENT

DOT POINT